"OPERATION RADIO" ON BEAM

Have you an old radio you no longer use? If the answer is yes, don't cart it to the junk yard. Instead, donate it to a new cause started by MSOE a few weeks ago.

The school has been collecting discarded radios which students taking the radio courses have been repairing. After being put in operational order, the sets are given to charitable organizations. Shortly after the program was announced, more than 90 radios were donated by generous Milwaukeeans. If the donor wishes the repaired radio given to a specific organization, the school will see that the group receives the set.

So don't throw away a radio which might be made usable; call the school so that some organization might have a radio which it otherwise could not enjoy. Charitable institutions and youth organizations needing radios can obtain them by phoning their requests to the school.
